Teaching and Learning Activities

Summary

The delivery of the course is based on a standard model of lecture (typically 1 hour) followed by seminar (typically 2 hours). (Total = 3 hours) complemented by on-line activities which are further developed in the proceeding scheduled learning activity. Lectures deliver key knowledge. Seminars facilitate enhancement and practical application of knowledge through use of case studies, simulations, projects, critical readings, and so on. Seminars also bridge the gap to module assessment, helping students to prepare for and engage with summative assessment tasks. To this end, module teams may use formative assessment tasks to help students progress and develop with the subject areas. Finally seminars offer guidance on additional independent learning, facilitated by extension tasks, guide for further reading and additional resources, aid by the use of VLE (see section 47).

Skills development at all levels is supported through the use of an extended induction model. This involves typically 1 hour per week of contact time with tutor(s) throughout the academic year, orientated towards acquisition and enhancement of subject-specific and generic skills. Skills development at level 4 focuses on the development of study skills to underpin acquisition of knowledge and tackling assessment tasks in a university environment. Skills development at level 5 focuses on the development of employability skills, with a particular focus on work placement opportunities for a sandwich year between levels 5 and 6. Skills development at level 6 focuses on research skills to support the dissertation and on employability. Effectively developing the skills required to successfully manage the transitions into University, through University and beyond.
In addition, learning and teaching on the course is supplemented by:

- Initial Induction - including to learning, teaching and assessment and VLE resources at each level of study,
- Course handbook - containing supporting guidance on course structure, to learning, teaching and assessment.
- Module handbooks - containing key learning materials, formative and summative assessment tasks.
- Work placement lectures – a structured series of lectures are delivered by the FBL work placement team during level 5 to orientate students to work placement opportunities and support students finding suitable opportunities.
- Volunteering or study abroad – a series of lectures are delivered by the International Office during levels 4 and 5 to orientate students to opportunities to study or volunteer abroad, with support in making study abroad applications. Strong encouragement is provided to students on this degree.
