Course Overview

BA Hons Public Relations and Brand Communication aims to provide a coherent, exciting, market-relevant single honours course of study that encourages students to apply theory to practice; develop cutting-edge digital communication skills and test their knowledge in the real world. Undergraduates benefit by studying on one of the most established PR degrees in Europe and gain the expertise needed for a successful career on a course recognised by the Public Relations and Communications Association (PRCA) and the Chartered Institute of Public Relations (CIPR).

Study covers the wider role of communications, from developing and implementing social media campaigns to the impact of marketing, media relations and internal communications. As well as learning how to build and manage relationships between companies and their customers, student will be encouraged to see themselves (and act) as communications professionals from the start. Whilst stressing the importance of effective self-branding, students will adhere to professional norms and to become entrepreneurial, ethical, self-reflexive individuals working in a diverse, global environment.

Course Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate the development and application of the necessary knowledge, transferable skills, professionalism and creativity to pursue a career in public relations and related professional fields across diverse local, regional and global environments.

2. Apply knowledge, theoretical principles and adopt a reflective approach to public relations and brand communication theory, research and scholarship to explore issues from a variety of situations.

3. Synthesise and apply different elements of theory to critique relationships between public relations and brand communication and socio-cultural, political, business and economic environments.

4. Demonstrate development of personal and professional attributes, ethics, reflective learning and creativity, in order to become entrepreneurial, resilient, self-directive, confident, effective communication practitioners and life-long learners.

5. Formulate informed points of view, identify new perspectives and apply professional competencies in the creation of persuasive communication, campaigns and strategies in order to influence public discourse.
Teaching and Learning Activities

Summary

The course adopts the strategy of moving students from dependence through interdependence to independence in learning. Students are initially guided in the research and tasks required but as they progress through the course students are expected to take increasing responsibility for their own learning. In particular the use of peer and self-assessment underpins the development of autonomous learning and self-development. Self and peer assessment will be a component of the Professional Skills Development strand at Levels 4 and 5. Here we will utilise digital technology to record presentations and get students to evaluate their own performance and that of others through the use of closed, assessed blogs. However, face-to-face teaching continues to be an integral part of most modes of delivery within this course.

On their entry to university, the course induction will welcome students and introduce their peers and university staff such as the Course Administrator, Personal Tutor/Academic Advisor and Course Director. Students will be introduced to the university ICT environment as a means of communication, and encouraged to participate in School, Student Union and University welcome activities, especially those with an international and cross-cultural focus. Students will be encouraged to see themselves as members of a diverse academic community and to value the contributions of their peers, through practical workshops and assessed classroom-based presentations. Modules such as PR & Current Affairs at L4 and Persuasive Cultures at L5 will recognise cultural differences through theoretical study and group activities in the analysis of case studies interactive exercises and internet activities. A responsible attitude to business management will be fostered through the L4 modules Marketing and the Business Environment, and Managing Communication for Employee Engagement; L5 modules: Strategic Brand Communication, Global Communication Project.

At all levels students work in seminar groups on case study activities which enable them to develop critical insights into the decision-making process of large organisations and appraising their actions, including an appreciation of the ethical consequences of their actions. The learning and teaching activities include one-to-one and group activities with the tutor in the classroom, via lectures as well as utilization of a range of digital and electronic sources including the VLE, where minimum requirement of each module is to detail module guides, lecture notes and assessment criteria. Students are also expected to engage with tutors and employers via twitter, blogs and other social media platforms. PR is a discipline which is embracing social media and looking to young graduates and practitioners to advise and monitor social media platforms so active engagement in these is encouraged across all levels.

Leeds Business School also provides a modern learning environment with specialist facilities that enable us to bring learning to life, such as a dedicated Media Suite consisting of a TV and Radio Studio, Control Gallery, Newsroom and Editing Suite, as well as state of art Crisis Simulation Facilities (Hydra Suite). The Hydra Foundation Suite is a unique, high-fidelity learning environment that enables the monitoring of real-time leadership and decision-making in response to simulated, as-live critical incidents that allows students to work with subject experts in applying knowledge to practice.
